CV JITTIMA PHOLSAWEK

Born 1959, Songkla province in Thailand.
Graduated from College of Fine Arts.

Jittima pholsawek works as a writer (feature writing, short stories and poems). She is also a producer for television documentary programmes. She has been working intensively with various art forms, including still photography, mixed media and performance art since 1991. Co-initiator of the Woman's Art Exhibition – 'Tradisexion', evolving into 'Womanifesto' - the International Women's Art Festival, Pholsawek has established the 'Community Art Project', engaging with local communities, exposing social, environmental and cultural dimensions of the local communities, especially in the areas where megadevelopment projects are proposed and communities are under threat of the changes at hand. As an artist and writer, Pholsawek conveys her reflections through both lenses, containing issues of human inequality, exploitation, cultural hegemony, and the colonialism of natural resources.

Community Art Project focuses on working in the community, illustrating the value of environment, culture and local people's livelihood, especially in the communities that face the changes by large development projects. For example; communities where culture and environment are threatened by tourism, or the communities that endure radical changes from the mega projects such as hydropower dams and coal-fired power plants etc. Examples of working areas are the Karen communities along the Salween River in Mae Hong Son province, Urak Lawoi community where the ethnic sea people live in Lanta Island of Krabi province, as well as several communities along the Mekong River both in Thailand and Lao PDR. The process of work begins with the artists engaging with the project through study of the information to date and elaborating on the work within their individual art practices, performance art, installation, photography and video. The project aims to create an arena of reflection through artistic practice and to document a community's history.
